

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

THE following collection of words has been arranged for use as a text-book on the subject of spelling. The words have been selected with great care, two considerations having been constantly kept in view ; first, that the word be in common use, and second, that it be one liable to be misspelled. No word has been selected simply because it is difficult. The spelling of English words is, at best, so arbitrary and inconsistent, that learning to spell only those words which occur in everyday life is a task of sufficient difficulty, without studying the curiosities of the language. Rules for spelling have been purposely omitted, as they are generally more a hindrance than a help in learning to spell.

The importance of the subject need not be urged ; it may be said, however, that although spelling is only a small part of a complete education, it is of primary importance. Some learn spelling with much more difficulty than others, but it must be learned. Notoriously poor spellers almost invariably claim that it is not natural for them to spell, and this very idea is the principal cause of their deficiency ; for they offer this as an excuse for all errors, and, therefore, never correct their mistakes. Suggestions regarding the use of the book will be found in the introduction.

INTRODUCTION

THE following suggestions regarding the study of spelling and the manner of using this book are offered with the hope that they may make the subject more interesting and the book more useful.

Spelling Blanks. — The lessons should be written in books prepared for the purpose, with blank spaces for rewriting all misspelled words. A convenient form of book is one made with twenty-five lines on a page. A lesson may then be written on the left side of two opposite pages, leaving the right side of each page blank for corrections. The misspelled words can then be rewritten directly opposite where they were first written. It is important that great care should be taken in making corrections, and misspelled words should not only be written correctly, opposite where they were first written, but should also all be written in one place, under the heading "Misspelled Words."

Definitions. — An accurate understanding of the meaning of words, and the ability to use the right word readily at all times, is one of the rarest of accomplishments. To assist in attaining this desirable end, it is evident that advanced pupils, at least, should study not only the spelling or form of words, but also the words themselves, their real significance and application. It is certainly an absurd waste of time and labor for advanced pupils to study the spelling of words without having any knowledge of their meaning or use.

The use made of the definitions on the following pages will, of necessity, vary in different schools, but the importance of understanding the meaning of every word in the lesson should be impressed on the mind of the pupil.

Pronunciation. — Another very important branch of the study of words is pronunciation. Many words are misunderstood, misapplied, and misspelled through a lack of knowledge of their proper pronunciation; and besides, mispronunciation is in itself often a serious fault, as much to be avoided as misspelling.

It has not been thought necessary to indicate the pronunciation of every word, further than the accent, but all words or syllables liable to be mispronounced are respelled to show the correct pronunciation. Pupils should be instructed to observe carefully the pronunciation of every word in studying the lesson. A good way to increase the interest in the subject is to call on one or more of the class each day to pronounce the difficult words in the next lesson. Particular care should be taken that the words be pronounced correctly in giving the lesson.

Dividing Words into Syllables. — There is a great difference of opinion among scholars, writers, and lexicographers regarding the proper syllabication of a great many words. In the present revision of this work Webster's High School Dictionary and Webster's International Dictionary have been followed in this regard, as well as in spelling and pronunciation, because those dictionaries are the ones most widely used in schools.

Capital Letters. — The rules for the use of capital letters should be thoroughly learned by every pupil.

Corrections.—The saying, “He who never makes a mistake the second time never makes a mistake,” is particularly applicable to the subject of spelling; for one who makes it a rule never to misspell a word but once, will soon never misspell a word.

Even the poorest spellers do not misspell every difficult word, but usually only a certain limited class of words; and the chief end and aim of spelling exercises should be the permanent correction of these errors. Whatever methods of correcting the lessons are used, the rewriting of all misspelled words at least twice, once directly opposite where they were first written, and again all together as before mentioned, should be insisted upon.

It is well to vary the method of making corrections. Pupils may be allowed to correct their work directly from the text-book, or exchange books and correct each other's work, checking the words misspelled. Another method is for the teacher to pronounce and spell the words correctly, each pupil checking the errors; or the books may be collected immediately after the exercise, and all errors and incomplete words checked by the teacher. In order that pupils may acquire the habit of care, it is advisable to mark mistakes of every kind, and also all changes, as errors.

The books should be examined after each exercise, to see that all corrections are properly made, and to mark the standing of each pupil.

Review Lessons.—It is very important that the work be frequently and thoroughly reviewed. The Review Lessons beginning on page 91 are to be used for this purpose. Other and more extended methods may be adopted as the circumstances permit.

The Proper Names, pages 102–104, should also be given with more frequency than the regular work.

Below is given a specimen page of a convenient form of spelling blank, showing one half of a written lesson, corrected.

LESSON 60. SEPTEMBER —, 19—.

1	anvil
2	hypocrisy	✓	hypocrisy
3	disappoint
4	oer	✓	o'er
5	adjective
6	deceive
7	ninetieth
8	rational
9	apology
10	holiday
11	pronunciation
12	century
13	horseradish	✓	horse-radish
14	furnace
15	granary
16	anguish
17	honeyed
18	accommodate

20	pedestal
21	quinine
22	sh-pshaw	✓	pshaw
23	surplus
24	compete
25	beggar

Advanced classes may be given two or more lessons for an exercise, and fifty of the most difficult words only, to be pronounced.

Teachers who find it desirable to require the pupil to write the definitions of the words, may use for this purpose the column designed for the rewriting of misspelled words, in which case the misspelled words will be rewritten on the last pages of the blank.

LOCAL WORDS

Local geographical and other words to be selected by the teacher, and written here correctly by the pupil from copy furnished by the teacher. This list of words to be studied and spelled the same as the other lessons.

APPENDIX

RULES FOR THE USE OF CAPITAL LETTERS.

Rule I. — Every sentence should begin with a capital letter.

Rule II. — Proper nouns — as names of persons, places, months, days of the week, etc. — should begin with capital letters.

Ex. — John, Sunday, July, New York, Mr. James A. Jones.

The names of the seasons — spring, summer, autumn, winter — do not begin with capital letters except when they are personified.

Rule III. — Every line of poetry should begin with a capital letter.

Rule IV. — Every direct quotation should begin with a capital letter.

Ex. — He asked, “ Who will go with me ? ”

A direct quotation is one in which the exact words are quoted.

Rule V. — Titles of honor or distinction, used alone or accompanied by nouns, should begin with capital letters.

Ex. — Mr. Smith; Dr. Jones; Hon. Henry Wilson.

Rule VI. — All words denoting the Deity should begin with capital letters.

Ex. — God; Lord; Creator; the Almighty; the All-wise; Infinite One; Supreme Being; Most High.

Personal pronouns or common words referring to the Deity, are usually capitalized, as: "The unseen Power above"; "the Judge of the world."

Rule VII. — Words derived from proper nouns should begin with capital letters.

Ex. — American; Roman; Scotchman; Spanish; English.

Rule VIII. — Names of things spoken of as persons should begin with capital letters.

Ex. — "The Morn, in russet mantle clad —."
"When Music, heavenly maid, was young —."

Rule IX. — Words of special importance, words used as names of particular objects or localities, and the important words in a heading, should begin with capital letters.

Ex. — Niagara Falls; the Tariff Bill; the White House; the Western States.

North, south, east, and west, are capitalized only when referring to some particular locality: as, “The North and the South are one.”

When there is a question as to which should be used, a capital or a small letter, use a small letter.

Rule X. — The pronoun I, and the interjection O, should be capitals.

Ex. — “O, that I had the wings of a dove!”

the 1990s, the number of people with a disability in the United States has increased by 25% (U.S. Census Bureau 2000). The number of people with a disability in the United States is expected to increase to 35% by the year 2020 (U.S. Census Bureau 2000).

As the number of people with a disability increases, the need for accessible information and communication technologies (ICT) also increases. The United States Department of Justice (DOJ) has issued a series of regulations to ensure that people with a disability have equal access to information and communication technologies (DOJ 2001). The regulations require that information and communication technologies be accessible to people with a disability. The regulations also require that information and communication technologies be designed to be usable by people with a disability.

The regulations have led to a number of changes in the design of information and communication technologies. One of the most significant changes is the requirement that information and communication technologies be designed to be usable by people with a disability. This has led to the development of a number of new technologies, such as screen readers, voice recognition, and large font displays.

Another significant change is the requirement that information and communication technologies be designed to be accessible to people with a disability. This has led to the development of a number of new technologies, such as Braille displays, large font displays, and high contrast displays. These technologies have made it possible for people with a disability to use information and communication technologies.

The regulations have also led to a number of changes in the way that information and communication technologies are used. One of the most significant changes is the requirement that information and communication technologies be used in a way that is accessible to people with a disability.
